

Generals Eclectic

Music that turned Paris on its ear!

The musicians of 18th Century Mannheim were so virtuosic that music historian Charles Burney dubbed them "generals." We're fortunate to welcome three modern-day "generals" of our own for an evening of challenging masterworks by five of the era's leading composers — including the Afro-French pioneer known as "The Black Mozart." Come hear the music that turned Europe on its ear.ý

Music that turned Paris on its ear!

The musicians of 18th Century Mannheim were so virtuosic that music historian Charles Burney dubbed them "generals." We're fortunate to welcome three modern-day "generals" of our own for an evening of challenging masterworks by five of the era's leading composers — including the Afro-French pioneer known as "The Black Mozart." Come hear the music that turned Europe on its ear.ý

Generals Eclectic

Friday, October 31, 2008 at 8:00 p.m.

First Unitarian Church

2125 Chestnut St., Philadelphia

Soloists: Hirono Oka, violin, Choong-Jin (CJ) Chang, violin and viola, and Madeline Blood, harp

Program

Johann Stamitz — Symphony in A Major

Chevalier Saint-George — Sinfonia Concertante

Francois-Adrien Boieldieu — Harp Concerto in C Major

Franz Beck — Overture to the Death of Orpheus

W.A. Mozart — Sinfonia Concertante, K. 364

