

Hexameron & The Clash of the Piano Titans

Hear a new performing edition for piano and orchestra

It was billed as an epic battle of the hands: In 1837, six piano-composer heavyweights – including Liszt, Chopin, and Czerny – were invited to spin their own variations on a theme by Bellini into a single piece called “Hexameron.” But unforeseen events – egos, perhaps – prevented the supergroup from meeting for their debut performance. Now, for one night only, twelve-handed pianist Kenneth Hamilton will bring to life the titanic clash that has been 172 years in the making.

Hear a new performing edition for piano and orchestra

It was billed as an epic battle of the hands: In 1837, six piano-composer heavyweights – including Liszt, Chopin, and Czerny – were invited to spin their own variations on a theme by Bellini into a single piece called “Hexameron.” But unforeseen events – egos, perhaps – prevented the supergroup from meeting for their debut performance. Now, for one night only, twelve-handed pianist Kenneth Hamilton will bring to life the titanic clash that has been 172 years in the making.

Hexameron & The Clash of the Piano Titans

Friday, November 13, 2009 at 8:00 p.m.

Arch Street Presbyterian Church

18th & Arch Streets

Philadelphia

Guest soloist:

Pre-Concert presentation by Kenneth Hamilton: Liszt's Frankenstein

Program

Mendelssohn – Octet arr. for string Orchestra

Liszt – Malediction for Piano and Orchestra

Mendelssohn - Fantasy on The Last Rose of Summer (piano solo)

Liszt, Thalberg, Pixis, Herz, Czerny, and Chopin – Hexameron for Piano and Orchestra

(World Premiere of Piano and Chamber Orchestra version)

TO ORDER TICKETS, PLEASE CLICK HERE.

